Helping you navigate to long-term success

We specialise in analysing data to uncover internal control deficiencies and inaccuracies in regulatory and internal compliance reporting so you can be confident in your business's operations.

Our experts have implemented systems for our clients that pull data from across enterprises and produce key metrics which inform them when making strategic business decisions.

We go beyond delivering valuable, one-off performance snapshots. We design and refine systems so that metrics automatically update whenever new data comes in. This means your business always has the latest and most accurate information readily available.

RPA software enables the automated entry of data into systems that run on a web browser, particularly useful for automating business processes for software systems that don't have a programming API. At Nexia Edwards Marshall, we've developed a reliable and scalable RPA software framework. We've used it to automate client processes including leave approval for Synergetic Synweb, the distribution of client portfolio reports from XPLAN, and reconciliations using data extracted from automatically downloaded bank statements. Built on open-source foundations, there are no ongoing license fees to be paid.

Our systems are cost-effective as there are no license fees required. When time frames are short or resources scarce, we work side-by-side with you and your team to deliver reporting capability and analysis so you and your business can unlock its true potential.
